

SHE HAS PSYCHICAL EPILEPSY.

Mrs. Christian Wanders from Her Home at Night with Her Two Children.

Just before 1 o'clock yesterday morning, when the rain and sleet were coming down hard, a comfortably clad little woman of 55, who led by the hand two little boys, came into Kalish's drug store in the Gerry society building a Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue. To Clerk Boyd she said she wanted to see the doctor. When no one told her there was none there she said she would wait until he came. The woman rambled in her speech, and her actions were so peculiar that Boyd thought she was insane. After she had waited in the store an hour he called in Policeman Horan of the East Twenty-second street station, and told him of his strange visitors. The woman crept into a corner, hugging the little child to her, and when Horan began to question her she shrank from him and refused to say a word. He tried for some time to get her to talk, but his efforts were futile. Then he took her by the arm and led her into the street, with the little boy clinging to her skirts. She was very quiet, and on the way to the station house she did not make the slightest resistance. Arrived there she glanced about her and said:

"Oh, sir, I know this place. It is a hospital, and I have been here before. The doctors have been treating me for my head for five years." When Sergeant O'Brien, who was at the desk, began to question her the woman brightened up somewhat, and finally told him her name was Margaret Chrystal, and that the two little boys were her sons. The older one, she said, was William, aged 5, and the other, Ormie, aged 3 years. She said she did not know where she lived, after which she again relaxed into silence. The Sergeant decided that she was not in her right mind, and he sent her to Bellevue Hospital to be examined as to her sanity. The little boys were very quiet, and when their mother was taken away they began to cry. All three Wills said that this mamma had another son, but he could not explain what he meant. At first he said that he lived at 47th Avenue, and later he changed it, and said he thought it was 147. A policeman was sent to both addresses, but he could find no one at either. They believed the child had not been worked against them. The jury was but a few moments in finding for the plaintiff.

CRAWFORD'S SHOT WAS FATAL.

INSURANCE CO. ALLEGED FRAUD.

Said the Man Examined Was Not the Man Who Died, but the Jury Find for the Plaintiff.

Annie Smith, as administratrix of the estate of her husband, Peter Smith, obtained a verdict before Justice Freedman in the Supreme Court yesterday for $1,000, with interest, against the Prudential Insurance Company of America, on a policy for that amount on the life of her husband.

The company claimed that a man who had dark hair had been passed off on them for examination, whereas the deceased man had red or sandy hair. They claimed that the man they had examined had large lung power, while Smith was consumptive. After she had waited in the store an hour he called in Policeman Horan of the East Twenty-second street station, and told him of his strange visitors. The woman crept into a corner, hugging the little child to her, and when Horan began to question her she shrank from him and refused to say a word. CRAWFORD'S SHOT WAS FATAL.

The Burglar Dismayed by the Sepulchral Ballist Bullets Died in Hospital.

Henry Helleberg, or Heller, the German burglar who was shot as he was breaking into the bedroom over James H. Crawford's store on Tuesday morning, died in the City Hospital in Newark early yesterday afternoon. Just before noon two companions of his were taken to his bedroom, and he was asked if they were the men who were with him when he broke into Crawford's place at Irvington. He said they were not, and told the names of two others, one of whom, it is learned, packed up his worldly goods and left Newark early on Tuesday morning.

The two suspects were August Gustafson and Karl Gustave Wiedman. They are both held, and the police believe that the criminal is really one of the two, and the other the victim of Crawford's shot to the old man's store.

Wiedman has served eighteen months' imprisonment for burglary, and held a parole. Gustafson was serving with Crawford on Monday evening. It is now believed by the police that Helleberg was a well-known convict whose picture is in the catalog of the Fourth precinct station. Nobody has claimed the corpse.
